Monthly Factsheet
30 October 2026

Investment Objective: Achieving long term capital growth in real terms and steadily increasing income. Our aim is to achieve a higher rate of total return than the FTSE All-Share Index Total Return through investing in a diversified portfolio of stocks.

Fund Managers' Comments

In October the Trust's NAV fell 0.6%, underperforming the FTSE All-Share benchmark which rose 1.1%. In a backdrop where the oil price rose and the sustainability of AI capital expenditure was being questioned, there was a sharp rotation in markets with defensive sectors outperforming. Oil producers such as Shell and BP performed well (both share prices rose 13-14% in October), as did data services companies Relx and LSEG (where the share prices rose 20% and 16% respectively). While Relx and LSEG had been seen as at risk of AI disintermediation earlier in the year, a further set of encouraging quarterly results led to a sharp relief rally. In contrast, cyclical sectors such as industrials performed poorly, as investors questioned whether rising input costs and a potential slowdown in AI capex would suppress future earnings growth. Industrial holdings such as Hill & Smith therefore performed poorly. Aside from industrials, the key detractors from the portfolio compared to its FTSE All-Share benchmark were holding less in large index weights that performed well, such as Shell and AstraZeneca, and holding more in AI-exposed next generation energy companies, for example fuel cell developer Ceres Power. We had taken substantial profits in Ceres earlier this calendar year, and the position size is now modest at less than 1%.

From a transactions perspective, within the healthcare sector we sold the positions in Swiss pharmaceutical Roche and US medical devices company Becton Dickinson following good performance. The proceeds were partially rotated into AstraZeneca and GSK. In the case of AstraZeneca, following the initial purchase last month we have continued to gradually add to the holding, while in the case of GSK we added on what we saw as an overreaction to a largely in line set of quarterly results.

Company specific risks

- This trust is suitable to be used as one component in several in a diversified investment portfolio. Circa 18 per cent. of the net asset value ('NAV') of the trust's portfolio is an investment in an independent professional service company. Investors should consider carefully the proportion of their portfolio invested into this trust.
- Active management techniques that have worked well in normal market conditions could prove ineffective or detrimental at other times.
- The trust could lose money if a counterparty with which it trades becomes unwilling or unable to meet its obligations to the trust.
- Shares can lose value rapidly, and typically involve higher risks than bonds or money market instruments. The value of your investment may fall as a result.
- The return on your investment is directly related to the prevailing market price of the trust's shares, which will trade at a varying discount (or premium) relative to the value of the underlying assets of the trust. As a result losses (or gains) may be higher or lower than those of the trust's assets.
- The trust holds an investment in the IPS business which are wholly owned subsidiaries and private shares.
- If a trust's portfolio is concentrated towards a particular country or geographical region, the investment carries greater risk than a portfolio diversified across more countries.
- The trust may use gearing as part of its investment strategy. If the trust utilises its ability to gear, the profits and losses incurred by the trust can be greater than those of a trust that does not use gearing.
